

Two world renowned antiquities experts confirm it's authenticity.

Each spent over an hour doing a close examination of the Talisman

Dr. Lori Verderame, The History Channel

Famously known as “Dr. Lori is an award-winning TV personality and Ph.D antiquities appraiser on the History Channel. She states that “The crystal talisman once owned by Napoleon Bonaparte is priceless.”

Susan Jacques, GIA

Susan M. Jacques, President and CEO of the Gemological Institute of America since 2014.

Prior to her tenure at GIA, Jacques was president and CEO of Borsheim's Fine Jewelry and Gifts in Omaha, Nebraska for two decades.

There, she reported directly to Warren Buffett, head of Berkshire Hathaway, which is Borsheim's parent company.

After close inspection of the Talisman she said “fascinating” several times and followed up with a personal introduction to the Smithsonian Museum.

The basis for a $250 Million Valuation

Janet Gwendolyn Smith

"Janet Gwendolyn Smith, a certified appraiser, now retired, examined the Talisman of Napoleon in person and told me confidentially that she thought the valuation exceeded $250 million."

—Randy Jensen

<https://www.jgsart.com/>

Emanuel DaGloria

Emanuel DaGloria, Founder and President of EDGIC International (EDGIC International Luxury Consultancy & Media Group), a global and international full luxury service provider, examined the Talisman documents and appraised the "Napoleon Bonaparte Crystal Talisman" as a "rare, genuine historical artifact which Napoleon Bonaparte did design, with secret codes, in precious jewels."

In an appraisal document, he listed the Talisman of Napoleon Bonaparte at the following value:

$250,000,000 USD (Two Hundred and Fifty Million US Dollars).

<https://www.edgic.eu/>

Note: Neither of these appraisers knew of the other's valuation!